

Development & Research Residency Application

DEADLINE : DECEMBER 12, 2016 at 5PM PST

Collaboratively offered by Los Angeles Performance Practice and Automata, with support from the California Art Council's Creative California Communities program.

ABOUT THE RESIDENCY PROGRAM

Los Angeles Performance Practice and Automata offer development residencies for Southern California artists creating new works of live performance. The program is designed to provide vital infrastructure for Los Angeles based artists, and places emphasis on work that reflects/connects to the unique histories, environments, communities, issues and artistic legacies that define it.

Selected projects receive 24-hour access to dedicated space for a one- or two-week period at Automata in Los Angeles' Chinatown District, as well as additional financial support in the form of a modest stipend. This is a alternative performance space/gallery, suitable for small to mid-scale projects, that either need minimal technical infrastructure or construct their own systems of design and installation.

Each residency will be crafted in collaboration with the artistic team, who are asked to identify specific areas of research, development and/or collaboration, along with a minimum of one point of public engagement, which may take the form of conversations, workshops, showings or other activities open to the pulic. In addition to supporting the quality of works being developed, we also seek to extend the dialogue about contemporary performance, and connect institutions, audiences and students to the creative life of artists.
